TOASTMASTERS INTERNATIONAL

SPEAKERS OF THE HOUSE CLUB

Wikipedia.com reports:

A common fear can be the fear of public speaking. People may be expertise speakers inside a room but when it becomes public speaking, fear enters in the form of suspicion that whether the words uttered are correct or wrong because there are many to judge it.

Toastmaster's International reports:

Believe it or not, your chances of dying of stage fright are extremely slim. You might feel as if you are dying on the stage, but chances are good your audience won't even notice your wobbly knees and sweating armpits. Even the best speakers were once terrified novices, feeling the same symptoms as you when facing an audience. Fear no more! Toastmasters are the best place to learn, to build your confidence, and to push yourself outside your comfort zone. It's a safe place where there is no penalty for failure!

How Speakers of the House club addresses the fear of public speaking:

- > We practice understanding and support in the learning process.
- We schedule events and participation that will enhance a person's experience.
- Each member receives materials to guide them through learning and growth.
 - A series of manuals offer helpful direction regarding productive membership
 - There is a communication track and a leadership track to enhance the area(s) you'd like to improve.
- A mentor is assigned to guide you through and offer assistance for your individual growth.
